The Sims 4 RELOADED Update 6 NO ORIGIN Crack Mr DJ CODEXlTune in to 'The Bachelor' for one last elimination and repeat that line Repeat that line: The Bachelor is over. After 20 dates and 25 nights of dates and nights of none-of-the-above, we say goodbye to Ben Higgins (or High Jo.) But when our favorite bachelor leaves the show, the show doesn't leave the stage. For the next one and a half weeks, viewers will be glued to their televisions to the most delightful reality show of them all, The Bachelorette. And more than six weeks after that -- the finale -- we'll close the book on The Bachelor. We say goodbye to Ben (or High Jo) and welcome back to ABC's The Bachelorette. Two Mondays from now, we're going to flip reality on its head. Every Monday we'll update you on the status of our favorite bachelors and bachelorettes, the real-life relationship drama of the season and how and when they're going to find a wife. Seriously, they're going to find a wife. One of them will make this lifelong commitment to the other person, and our job is to find out whether Ben, Chris, Sean or Nick is going to find love. This is our reality, ABC's reality, America's reality, and we're about to kick off our three-part series starting Monday (Oct. 25). For starters, we're going to talk to everyone about what we saw when we saw the dramatic exits. It's one thing to get a rose in the first few weeks of the show, but it's another to leave the show with a red rose in your lap. It's not for lack of love -- we all knew those relationships were doomed. Some of them were destined to end in bachelorette-less relationships. But there's still something about leaving the show with nothing but rose petals in your lap. (The Bachelor – ABC) It's leaving with no answer, leaving without the heartbreak of a broken engagement, and that's the toughest kind of exit. It's almost as tough as admitting to yourself that you liked your one-night
