Before you begin you need to ask yourself a few simple questions. These include: The level of your qualifications. How much teaching experience do you have? How much on-the-job training are you willing to have? Can you work one-day-a-week? The choice of school or college will depend on your level of experience. However, the main point to think about is the way you want to teach. Every university has options for you to teach. They may not be the same as the system you taught in before or if you taught for a private school or college before. But, there are a few basic things that you will need to consider: Age – how old are you, and do you intend to teach indefinitely. If not, what is your retirement date? Location – what is your location? Are you moving to a new state/country? A teaching lifestyle is not as easy as you may think. You can only have a set amount of hours in the week and an income that may not stretch to a lifestyle in the areas you are planning to live in. If you think that you would like to teach then you should start thinking about the area that you are going to live in. Do you want to live somewhere urban or live in the country? If you want to live in the country, then there are few options. You can either move to a larger city with schools or you can become a teacher in a private school. Do you have a car? If so, how will you make your commute to school? If you don't have a car, then you may have to rely on public transport or walking. Do you want to learn more about teaching? To find out more about teaching and if you are qualified. Another way you can find out more about teaching would be to go to a local school and speak to the principal of the school and
