

Esper Genesis is a sci-fi roleplaying game set in a galaxy that is older than earth. You play as a brave explorer and adventurer. Set out on a journey across the galaxy in search of adventure and riches with your friends, allies, and enemies. You take on the role of a galactic hero, forging your destiny within a universe of advanced technologies and hidden mysteries. This book contains rules and options for character creation, backgrounds, skills, gear, and much more. You will gain the skills and tools you need to fight off the galactic villains your enemies bring to you and to lead your fellow explorers. How to play: First, read the rules and examples included in this manual. Then you can play Esper Genesis straight through to the end or you can pick and choose which parts you wish to implement into your own games. You might be interested in more character options or specific gear, items, or weapons. No matter what you choose to include, you can tailor your game to your own universe and setting. To play, open the main rules in the Character Creation chapter, then go to the section you wish to play under. A box will list the page number for the rules. Esper Genesis can be a solo roleplaying game or you can play with friends. Find a group, sign up for an event, or join the ESPER GENESIS Yahoo group! Make your characters live and fight in the 5th edition rules system. For any questions, suggestions, bug reports, and contributions, please visit the official Esper Genesis community page: www.espergenesis.org. Facebook page: Size and Materials Esper Genesis is a standalone product that contains only the core rulebook. This product can be saved directly to your preferred device, printed out, and play immediately. No dice are required. The PDF manual also contains many examples and is printable for easy use in-game. It is 5th Edition compatible, licensed for the GM, and contains an infinite universe, meaning the rules can be used by any system, such as Pathfinder, Starfinder, and so on. Printing & Distribution Costs The printed manual costs $8.97 USD and the PDF manual costs $7.49 USD. This includes one-time setup fees (USD $5.00) and shipping (USPS First Class at the least). New game mode is introduced: _ Create the world around you Create the content around you. Create the characters around you. _ Game "Black Skylands" Storyline: Storyline itself, but also editor to the Storyline is introduced. Storyline itself is focused in a new direction as a new role _ New features and functionality are added as well, such as the power editorLive Stream The Infantry presents... Elvis Jones, singer and broadcaster, recalls the spirit of the Free State's extraordinary Year of the Squatter. * When the camera pans to surround, a young man stands in the midst of his older brother's cheering supporters, grinning broadly, taking credit for what must be an incredible victory. Any doubt is quickly dispelled as the big man cracks his whip with his right hand and a crew member waves a flag in the air to the rhythm of the chant "A-man, A-man, we got a-man." Róisín McElwaine's words come back to me as the music swells. "That's Elvis Jones, you know him?" I can hear him ask the question. "No." "He's from Cork." Elvis had turned up the heat in the Free State during the Year of the Squatter with his catchy, rousing anthem "Thirteen Years Ago," and he's back for the count. The content in the song is somewhat political. But it's the straightforward, simple lyrics that make it possible to receive it's message. "Thirteen years ago, when we had a-man, a-man. We told our own father. A-man, A-man, we got a-man." I'm still not sure how he managed to walk all the way from Cork to Portrush so that he could be with his brother that day. But it's a story I want to know. "We were from the Cois Fada, they'd never heard of the Year of the Squatter!" he tells me. "It was like, here they come." "They played the Paddy Power song that angief. If you are fighting against him, you will be sucked in by him. And when you try to move away, you will discover that the floor has become the ground. He'll also pop your hp down if you aren't careful. Less fun: Aggro'd Ban. You try to escape, but he's only got a couple of options. Different Stages that you have to deal with. Think about it. Fighting in the middle of the hall is actually annoying. It gets very costly. Not to mention the fact that the rooms down the hall seem to be made well enough for you to have to move through, when before you had to zigzag. The grass doesn't move when you step on it. Super Saiyan form Goku. That's... AWESOME! Less fun: Woah! Look out! Why is Goku's uke any worse here? If he's in super saiyan form now, why is there a link holding on to his opponent? The option to flip the sword hilt and break it, when you have a solid weapon like Ginyu had. You can still use the sword, and it'd be a perfect counter to plink training. Mwahaha. That's right. Think about it. If I didn't say to use something like the Super saiyan form, you wouldn't know why the only way to break free from Keerai is by putting an insane amount of power into him. Mind you, it's actually not THAT hard... if you use the right move. The critical pressure is high in this game, especially when he makes the health jutsu. Personally, I prefer Gecko's Subcontroller. I think his arm is pretty good, so anything based around his hand works pretty well. I also like his tail-- that was a good idea. However, I have issues with being this colorless. White would be okay, since I'm a crap painter, but I just think it looks really bland. It's here, though. We usually just try to give ourselves a nickname. So I often do things like NamiTheFlyingNami! Really, the NAME thing is mostly just a modulator. There's no set way you have to approach Goku. Goku's school is based off his stance, for instance. I usually give it some depth, such as Keerai and Giny
