The Torpedo 120 was built at the Murska Sobota factories, and was to remain in production for a long time; it was gradually replaced, beginning in 1938, with the improved 120F. The last Torpedo version, the 120N, was introduced in 1946. A total of 8,573 Torpedos were built in two series, some of which were built with a four-stroke engine of the 1250 type. The most prominent were the 120N atlas which had a four-stroke 170 hp (130 kW) engine with a gearbox and clutch, and the 120N-1 with a four-stroke 175 hp (130 kW) engine and a gearbox. The most numerous was the 120N with 6,118 produced during the war. In the later models a two-stroke engine of 1,900 cc was also used. In the Yugoslav market Â . We report on a 34-year-old male patient with recurrent episodes of acute pancreatitis, which was finally diagnosed by endoscopic retrograde cholangiopancreatography (ERCP) and sphincterotomy. However, the correct diagnosis of the disease was delayed for several months due to the incorrect choice of the final diagnostic technique. Diagnostic procedures used in acute pancreatitis are discussed. This case illustrates the value of ERCP and the delayed diagnosis of this patient. Molecular studies on wheat-Lolium hybridization. A series of molecular techniques have been developed and used for wheat-Lolium hybridization. These include chromosome analysis using the fluorescence in situ hybridization (FISH) technique, agarose gel electrophoresis (AGE), synthetic oligonucleotide probe assays and phosphorimaging. The field trial of hybrid wheat plants showed a wide variation in performance between hybrids and also between different plants of the same cross. Some of the hybrids were found to be free of wheat chromosome which led to the unsuccessful separation of cytological and DNA markers. FISH analysis with repetitive DNA sequences showed variation between DNA-PCR amplified products from different wheat-Lolium recombinant inbred lines (RILs) of the same cross. AGE analysis of pentacryptins showed wheat and Lolium specific bands which together with rDNA-specific bands showed that the putative progenitor, that had contributed the wheat genome, was hybridized with both ribosomal DNA and pentacryptin of the Lolium. As the most efficient and rapid method of identification, the d0c515b9f4

docking systems have been developed in order to facilitate the docking of a boat at a marina or other type of dock. In order to provide the necessary torque to the boat in order to dock at a dock, a boat may require a substantial amount of propulsion. In the case of smaller fishing boats and pleasure craft, the propulsion systems may be of a relatively small size, such as a water jet propulsion system. In larger boats such as yachts, catamarans and other large craft, a larger propulsion system is typically required. A larger propulsion system typically requires a larger propeller which is structurally coupled to a drive shaft. The drive shaft in turn is coupled to an impeller by a coupling such as a universal joint, a pin joint, or a loose coupling. Such an arrangement allows the propeller to pivot about the drive shaft such that the axis of rotation of the propeller can be positioned in a substantially horizontal position in order to
