Google+ : Twitter: Facebook: Introduction to Kotlin Programming part 5 This is part of the series- Introduction to Kotlin Programming _____ If you want to get into Kotlin, you must know that Kotlin is a multi paradigm programming language. It is better than java but simple to learn because it is comparable to C like. This video is about Kotlin language in general and also I am giving idea about how to install the Kotlin installed on our system so that you can execute its programs in Java Virtual Machine. Kotlin is an open source programming language which is developed and maintained by the Kotlin team of JetBrains. It is used by the Android framework and also by JetBrains itself. Kotlin programs are more concise than Java, and better integrated with the Android development. It is used by both Android Studio and Eclipse. Other IDEs are currently in the development process as well. Its development environment is Integrated with IntelliJ IDEA, Webstorm and Android studio IDE. The following are some good facts of Kotlin 1. First and foremost Kotlin is an Object Oriented Programming (OOP) language 2. Kotlin is a multi paradigm programming language which is used for imperative, object oriented, functional and also non-OOP or hybrid paradigm. 3. Kotlin is a statically typed language that is strongly typed 4. With Kotlin, we can integrate Java and JVM based technologies with just few lines of codes 5. Kotlin supports binary compatibility 6. Better readability and also easier debugging. 7. Kotlin is faster than Java 8. With Kotlin, we can execute Java programs easily 9. It is an open source language but well equipped 10. Kotlin is developed by JetBrains, and also open source 11. Kotlin is a JVM based language so we can use Kotlin in multiple environments - JVM, JavaScript, .NET, Node.js among other things. 12. For those who are into JVM, Kotlin is a good choice and also there is a way to convert java code to Kotlin. We can compile Kotlin to JavaScript and also Byte code. If you like this Video then

What's new in The Last Birdling - Digital Soundtrack:

The Archer It was long past dawn. A glimmer of sunlight appeared above the horizon as it spread over a darkened landscape of forest and of barren mountain. Lances of clear, bright dawn radiated through the branches of the forest as light flooded its level forest floor. Sealskin stepped out from the shadows. The former agent of the C'f'h'krés'n'hast had a plan in mind but was hesitant to point it out, simply because Sealskin wasn't sure how far to trust the man. He wasn't much happier with the other man, the one called Grado. His only real ally. The other half of the duo that had given the Ferret the Gauntlet things. Grado. The other man woke up and wandered across the camp. The number of leaves he picked up while he walked suggested he wasn't asleep. Sealskin watched the hunter attack his overnight meal. His stomach growled as he noted the man picked out more and more of his food, The former agent of the C'f'h'krés'n'hast turned to face Grado. Grado had said he would take care of the Ferret, and Sealskin hadn't killed the man. He chose not to "disclose" until he saw how Grado would act towards the man. The man across the camp rolled up one of the sleeves of his shirt and showed Sealskin an extremely large shoulder. What kept that happened "more", the desert lance. A symbol of lawlessness and a symbol of his home. The desert, where things happened. "There's a package for you, Savoir-faire. In my tent. Please take it, it's an invitation. A death worm... a lot of it. It won't mask any lingering intent, but it will make your death harder and slower." Having gained the trust of the Ferret Sealskin understood the former agent's fears. Sealskin pointed towards the open tent of the magic user. His heart pounding with dread at the risks he entailed, he silently stepped into the tent. A dark-skinned woman beckoned, her grim face accompanied by a silvery bird hiding behind a pool of haze. Her voice was the first Sealskin heard after coming in the tent,

We live in a dark time. The humans have united, a union from strength to strength. They've seen the worst of the world and its horrors. Now they will find out, who their true enemy is. What started as a plan to create peace, turned into a nightmare of attacks, death and darkness. Who shall live, who shall die? Our arrival is the last hope for our species, a hope to change the course of destiny. Prepare yourselves, for the end of man, is about to begin. Story wise, this is a Sandbox-RPG and it features an interactive tale where the player controls and choices matter. Story driven and not experience based. Every quest contains more than one ending and you, the player, are free to solve this in any way you want. This game contains adult content and strong language. © 2010 Mark Brooks and Mark Bryan © 2010 Creative Tim Inc. Dedicated to my mother, who likes piñatas, and who always believed in me. For more information on the origins of this project, please visit: If you are a fan of Sandbox-RPG, first-person-shooter and horror games, then you are in for a treat, because this game is as much about the story-telling as it is about the gameplay and, in a few words, this is the best game you've ever played. I've played it right through three times and I still can't seem to stop playing it. I spend hours trying to get 100% -something- on every levels, because the content is incredibly high and I can't even imagine how many hours the real story will take. You start in a world that has been devastated by war and you are given some tools to explore this world. In the beginning you'll only be able to see the world through a small hole, but after the first hours you will be able to see more and more of what you're driving through. If you're tired of blasting cars and trucks, try smashing into them and you'll see something even more surprising than the hit-cars cutscenes were! Anyways, the world you start in is heavily destroyed, but you know it will change soon. You'll be given your first gun, and a quest to kill the godliest being of all: The Evil Piñata
