Ultra HD Blu-ray vs. HD Blu-ray [Direct Link] Dual Link - HDMV ââ,¬Å"Dual Linkââ,¬Â∏ videostreams two different movie streams to both a computer and a display at the same time. Dual Link operation is similar to 3D cinema movie streams, but 2D. Dual Link improves picture resolution and allows 2D viewing on computer monitors and HDTVs. UHD Blu-ray benefits ââ,¬Å"4K images with stunning HDR, faster-than-ever performance, a hi-tech code structure and a massive library of contentââ,¬Â□. UHD Blu-ray delivers images that are up to 100 times sharper than the previous HD standard. Gigabit Ethernet capabilities allow the use of fast data communication applications as well as performance benchmarks. Ultra HD Blu-ray format delivers the highest image quality the world has ever seen, with benefits including improved resolution, color, contrast, and brightness. UHD Blu-ray content requires new home theater equipment that supports back-end 3D formats as well as new 4K monitors. UHD Blu-ray will enable consumers to enjoy 4K video at home, which will help drive the adoption of 4K-ready televisions and set-top boxes. By creating the highest-quality content, Ultra HD Blu-ray owners will benefit from more advanced video technology and immersive entertainment. The Ultimate HD Blu-ray Player ââ,¬â€∏ Samsung DM-UX1A900 [Direct Link] : The Ultimate HD Blu-ray Player supports Ultra HD Blu-ray up to 60 frames per second and features a lossless Blu-ray player and transfer via HDMI. It also includes a slimline remote control and exclusive Internet viewing tool, Samsung Link. A long-lasting power supply is a required element for future-proofing a home theater system. Samsung is announcing the Samsung MPA-X500 FVLP® which will provide a 1000 hour and 500 hour battery life. The Samsung MPA-X500 FV 6d1f23a050
