I really liked Lightroom for its simplicity & capability to manage my workflow. After my first run through (and so far use) with Lightroom 5.X, I am of course, disappointed by the laggy operation. I know that what we are facing is a typical bug in Version 5.X. But it's also unfortunate because I liked the previous version a lot. I guess it's not too late to push back and make some changes. It would be very reassuring also if Adobe listed some alternatives - other Lightroom alternatives (Linux, Windows). Sorry for the long comment :) A recent update of Adobe's Photoshop CC greatly improves the overall operation speed while providing more and new options. For instance, you can now quickly identify and correct with simple clicks all objects cluttering your image. This new feature has already proven its worth for many photographers. For example, you can today immediately identify all objects in your image and select them to be removed with a simple click. Similarly, you can also manipulate objects with a new rotoscoping feature. The new Photoshop CC software makes manipulation of image objects easy and intuitive. The software is refreshed with new features and user-friendly interface. The new features are certainly welcome however, there are also some problems that need to be addressed. The performance of the software is lag, I'm especially noticing these problems while lag when switching between several images. And especially when moving with objects through image stacks. These are nice but highly uncomfortable to work with. I'm not sure if the lag is Lightroom or Photoshop but it would be nice to see some improvement

"#NahMan I haven't signed elsewhere, but it sounds like I will," Kaepernick said, suggesting he would be joining the Dolphins, depending on the condition of his deal in San Francisco, a team he had been with since the end of the 2016 season. The latter announcement proved to be erroneous (as it turned out) when Kaepernick found a new and slightly more accommodating employer in the form of the Raiders.
